A Welcoming Tradition

Attracting and welcoming newcomers to Al-Anon is so important. We have all experienced our first Al-Anon meeting: the nervousness, frustration, embarrassment, and annoyance. My first recollection is being put at ease as soon as I entered the room. My second is being bombarded with a variety of pamphlets about Al-Anon and the family disease of alcoholism. I remember looking at them thinking, All this for me?

Welcoming newcomers to their first Al-Anon meeting has been a long-standing tradition that is usually accompanied by passing on Al-Anon literature. The “door” through which newcomers arrive to Al-Anon varies widely today. As members, we need to be prepared to meet them—however they get here—and today we have many options! We are fortunate to be able to provide resources in print, digitally, and through our al-anon.org website.

Members from groups meeting electronically shared with World Service Office Staff that newcomers were flocking to phone and online meetings well before the COVID-19 pandemic. While the various groups welcomed them and explained what Al-Anon was all about, there was nothing that could be immediately provided or shared with them in the form of a newcomers’ packet. Those conversations led to the creation of a one-time, English-only, newcomers’ email that phone and online meeting attendees could request. This email launched in 2020, just at the start of the pandemic, and was announced at the virtual 2020 World Service Conference.

The email was so well received that it was made available to anyone attending an Al-Anon meeting for the first time, whether in person, online, or by phone. According to the 2022 World Service Conference Summary, the Welcome Newcomer! email was a huge success, requested more than 20,000 times since March of 2020!

Today, newcomers can visit the al-anon.org/welcome webpage, which is available in English, Spanish, and French. This introductory page features much of the same information from the Welcome Newcomer! email and provides links to relevant information about Al-Anon meetings and other resources available on al-anon.org.

In 2021, the digital booklet Welcome Newcomer! \(eK-10\) became available for purchase. Members quickly learned that these e-booklets can be given as gifts, provided the giver knows the recipient’s email address and preferred digital reader platform. Since many people now opt for the convenience of digital resources, some groups have created a new service position to make sure newcomers are offered the Welcome Newcomer! ebooklet. The original Welcome Newcomer! packet \(K-10\), which contains several pamphlets outlining Al-Anon basics, continues to be available in print in English, Spanish, and French on the Al-Anon Online Bookstore.

Creating those initial connections with newcomers is crucial to Al-Anon’s primary spiritual aim: to help families and friends of alcoholics. We want to provide the newcomer with not only a warm welcome, but also some tangible, easily accessible resources as a bridge to help carry them to their next meeting... and the next meeting...and so on!

“OUR COMMON WELFARE”—NOTES FROM THE WSO

SOME INS AND OUTS of GROUP BANKING AND FINANCIAL ACCOUNTS

Group funds may be handled in various ways, in accordance with each group’s conscience. Some groups may use a cash method, while others have simple savings accounts from which they replenish reloadable debit cards. Still others choose to open a group checking account. As financial industry fees continue to climb, it pays to research the features of various accounts. Whatever method is chosen, as a prudent measure, groups are encouraged to have multiple signers with group account access for transparency and accountability as well as in the event of an emergency.

Remember that individual groups are not tax-exempt nonprofit organizations and thus may not claim that status in relation to their banking. Please see pages 55–56 of the 2022–2025 Al-Anon/Alateen Service Manual (P-24/27) v2 for more information on group bank accounts.
